In the long list of outstanding goaltenders who have manned the crease for the Clarkson Hockey program, none rates better than Bruce Bullock. A two-time All-America, earning the prestigious honor in 1970 and 1971, Bullock was also selected to the highly exclusive ECAC 1970s All-Decade team. From the fall of 1968 until March of 1971, the Golden Knights had a chance to win every game because of the brilliant play of Bullock. Playing in 85 games under head coach Len Ceglarski, the Toronto, Ontario native compiled a 61-19-3 record along with a .905 save percentage and a 2.95 goals against average.

Playing in 26 games as a sophomore in his first season of varsity competition for the Green and Gold, Bullock amassed 728 saves and helped lead Clarkson to a 19-7-2 record during the 1968-69 campaign.

The following season, 1969-70, the 5-7, 150-pound Bullock backstopped the Knights to one of their best seasons ever as Clarkson, ranked second in the country, finished with a 24-8 overall record which included second-place showings in the ECAC and NCAA tournaments. He posted regular-season shutouts over Laval, Yale, Colgate and New Hampshire.

Despite being on the losing end in the championship games of the league and national tourneys, Bullock was selected Most Valuable Player at the ECAC Championship Tournament at the Boston Garden and NCAA All-Tournament goaltender. At the national championship played in Lake Placid, Bullock posted 30 saves in Clarkson's 4-3 victory over Michigan Tech in the semifinals and then followed with 40 stops in the title game, a 6-4 loss to Cornell.

As a senior in 1970-71, Bullock set the Clarkson record for most wins in a season as he posted a 27-4-1 mark in the Knights' goal while posting a .920 save percentage and a 2.37 goals against average. Bullock was named a first-team ECAC All-Star and was also honored as the league's Most Valuable Player.

After his standout collegiate career, Bullock, who was named Clarkson's Outstanding Senior Athlete in 1971, became the first Golden Knight to play in the National Hockey League, tending the crease for the Vancouver Canucks.

He played 16 games in the NHL from 1972-77 and posted a 3-9-3 record. He also played professionally for the Seattle Totems in the World Hockey League and the Tulsa Oilers in the Central Hockey League.

Bullock closed out his professional hockey career with the Phoenix Roadrunners in the Pacific Hockey League, playing 62 games over two seasons from 1977-79.

HELEN SNELL CHEEL

CLARKSON UNIVERSITY ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME

2005 INDUCTEE

Helen Snell Cheel was a lifelong benefactor of Clarkson University. Mrs. Cheel, who passed away on March 18 at her home in Ho-Ho-Kus, New Jersey at the age of 100, was a major contributor to the $14 million campus center and hockey arena, which bears her name. Mrs. Cheel's philanthropic nature was rooted in her family. Her parents, Congressman Bertrand H. Snell and Sara Merrick Snell, made their first major gift to Clarkson in 1927 to improve athletic facilities.

Helen Cheel's generous support of Clarkson University was evident for all to see in 1991 when she became the principal benefactor for the construction of a $14 million, 3,000-seat, multipurpose arena and campus center. Clarkson recognized Mrs. Cheel's gift to the University by naming the Center after her. The Cheel Arena, within the Cheel Campus Center, is also the home of Helen's cherished Golden Knights hockey team. On the occasion of her 100th birthday, Mrs. Cheel was presented with her very own #100 Golden Knights hockey jersey. In typical witty fashion, she quipped, "I will be ready now to suit up for next season." This jersey is part of the permanent display in the Campus Center honoring Mrs. Cheel. In addition to her substantial donation to the construction of the facility, Mrs. Cheel established a maintenance endowment to ensure that both the Center and surrounding grounds would be properly maintained.

At the Center's dedication, Helen had this to say: "Clarkson has always meant a great deal to me and members of my family, so it gives me great pleasure to assist in this important endeavor. My involvement in bringing the Cheel Campus Center to reality has brought me great satisfaction and moments of joy. I feel that it has added significantly to the appearance of the campus and to campus life. While I realize it will not be possible to replicate that experience, it has led me to consider what more I might do for Clarkson."

Clarkson would not have to wait long for Mrs. Cheel to decide what more she could do for the University. In 2000 Mrs. Cheel became the primary benefactor for construction of a world-class building that houses the Clarkson School of Business, faculty offices in Liberal Arts, and the administrative offices of the School of Arts and Sciences. Construction of the Bertrand H. Snell Hall, named in honor of Helen's father, allowed Clarkson to complete its move of undergraduate programs from the Potsdam village to the hill campus.

In 1995 Clarkson bestowed on Mrs. Cheel an Honorary Doctor of Science degree "for her lifelong loyalty, her profound generosity as a benefactor, and her magnificent contributions to the quality of campus life at the University."

On April 16, 2005, Tony Collins, president of Clarkson University, announced a bequest to Clarkson of approximately $27 million from the Estate of Helen Snell Cheel (May 10, 1904 – March 18, 2005). President Collins remarked, "This magnificent gift does not write the final chapter of Helen Cheel's generosity to Clarkson, but rather keeps the pages of her life with Clarkson forever open to reflect her compassionate spirit each year through the initiatives this endowment will fund as part of our ongoing evolution to excellence. Every future Clarkson student will benefit from Mrs. Cheel's boundless generosity."

Regarded as one of the premier collegiate wrestlers in New York State in the early 1950s, Hank Domingos helped to establish the wrestling team at Clarkson and played a major role in the rapidly growing interest in the program as a sport on campus.

As a freshman in 1952-53, the Massena, NY native competed on the College's club team and came through undefeated in four matches under student coach "Rip" Bloodgood.

Under legendary coach and inaugural Clarkson Athletic Hall of Fame inductee Jack Hantz, wrestling became a varsity sport at Clarkson in 1953 and Domingos figured to be a prominent wrestler for the Knights over the next three seasons, completing his career with an undefeated dual-meet record of 37-0.

Competing at 130 and 137 pounds as a sophomore, Domingos went 7-0 and helped the Green and Gold make an impressive debut as a varsity sport at the college. The Knights chalked up a 6-1 record with victories earned twice over Queens and Paul Smiths, once over Colgate and a split with McGill.

In 1954-55, Domingos, the bespectacled Holcroft counselor, went undefeated at 12-0 with nine falls and three decisions.

With the opening of Alumni Gym on the hill campus in 1955, the wrestling program found a new home after three years at the old gym on Pierrepont Avenue and experienced tremendous support from the student body in the new facility as Domingos enjoyed an outstanding senior campaign. He finished undefeated in the regular season with a perfect 14-0 record wrestling at 130 pounds. In March of his senior campaign, Domingos, along with teammate

Bob Shepard, became the first postseason wrestling aggregation in history to represent Clarkson College at the 4-I (Interstate Intercollegiate Individual Invitation) tournament in Cleveland, Ohio.

Seeded #2 in the tourney, Domingos competed against the best small-college wrestlers in the East. After totaling up 21 minutes of tournament wrestling in less than ten hours, a tremendous strain on the human body, Domingos won a fourth place medal in the 130-pound class.

An outstanding student, he also excelled in the classroom. Majoring in electrical engineering, he was ranked among the top five in his senior class and was involved in numerous campus activities. Upon graduation, Domingos was awarded the prestigious Levinus Clarkson Award, presented at commencement to one of two students who in the judgment of the University faculty has demonstrated the best combination of scholarship and professional achievement.

Domingos served many years at the University as a professor and Department Chairman School of Electrical and Computer Engineering. He won the University's Outstanding Teaching Award in 1989 and was also a recipient of the Golden Knight Alumni Award.

His daughter, Gigi '83, and son, Scott '88, also attended Clarkson and played hockey on the women's and men's team, respectively.

Domingos is a founding committee member of the Clarkson Athletic Department Hall of Fame.

MICHAEL KIRMSE

2005 INDUCTEE

One of the Golden Knights' all-time leading scorers on the soccer pitch, Michael Kirmse helped to lead Clarkson to several of its most successful seasons during the early 1990s, and continued his soccer career after graduation by becoming the first Golden Knight to compete professionally, playing several years of A-League soccer in the U.S. and overseas in Germany.

A senior select all-star from Sachem High School, the 5-8,155-pound midfielder from Holbrook, NY made an immediate impact for the Green and Gold as a freshman in 1990 and continued to provide plenty of outstanding plays for the highlight reel as well as earning numerous all-star accolades throughout his stellar four-year career at Clarkson.

Clarkson Soccer enjoyed outstanding success with Kirmse in the lineup, posting a 45-22-4 overall record from 1990-93. Head coach Willi Steinrotter's squads competed for the league title in each of Kirmse's four years and advanced to postseason play every fall with Kirmse leading the way.

As a freshman, Kirmse, who gained notice for his headstand/flip throw-ins, led the Knights with five game-winning goals and finished third on the scoring charts with 18 points, including eight goals. The following season he was Clarkson's leading playmaker with 11 assists and contributed 19 points. As a junior, Kirmse was voted captain by his teammates and led the Green and Gold in scoring with 18 points, including seven goals.

Although he had knee surgery in the April before his senior year, the second-year captain saved his best for last. Kirmse dominated in his final campaign by setting the school record for points in a season and tying the University's mark for goals in a year while leading the Knights to a berth in the 1993 NCAA Division III Final Four.

Kirmse played through a severe ankle sprain in the latter stages of the schedule but still led the Golden Knights to their most successful season ever in the fall of 1993. He highlighted the Clarkson offensive charge with a school-record 16 goals and 42 points to help the Green and Gold post a 13-4-2 overall record, including a 6-0-0 Empire Athletic Association (EAA) mark. Kirmse tallied both goals in the Knights' 2-0 victory at archrival St. Lawrence on October 1 as Clarkson capped off a perfect league campaign to claim its first ever conference title and an automatic berth into the 32-team NCAA Tournament.

In the NCAA Northeast Regional, Kirmse continued to shine. He tallied a goal in the regional semifinal win against Plattsburgh and scored the winning goal in Clarkson's 2-0 victory over Cortland in the regional finals. In the following contest, Kirmse provided the dramatics in the Knights' third straight NCAA win. His goal against Rowan at the 51:17 mark in the quarterfinal round of the 1993 NCAA Tournament, held at Snell Field in mid-November, was the only score of the contest and lifted the Knights into the Final Four.

Kirmse earned numerous all-star honors while at Clarkson, including being named a second-team All-America and 1993 EAA Player of the Year. He was named a league all-star in each of his four seasons and selected to the prestigious All-NYS team three times.

Kirmse completed his CU career tied for second on the Knights' all-time scoring chart with 97 points on 35 goals and a school-record 27 assists in 69 games. He left Clarkson holding school records for goals, assists (11) and points in a season as well as assists in a game (3) and career.

After graduating in 1994 with a degree in Engineering and Management, and a one-year stint with Harris Corporation, Kirmse decided to move on to a productive professional career. He played two years in Germany, seven seasons in the A-League for the Rochester Raging Rhinos, Syracuse Salty Dogs and Virginia Beach Mariners, as well as two seasons with the Buffalo Blizzard of the NPSL Indoor League. Kirmse, always a fan favorite, has played over 250 professional matches and has played just about every position in the pros, earning nicknames such as, "Mr. Versatility" and "Super Sub".

One of his biggest moments professionally came in the 1999 U.S. Open Cup where he helped the underdog Rhinos become the first A-League team to win the championship. Kirmse assisted on the deciding goal in Rochester's 1-0 victory over the defending Major League Soccer Champion Chicago Fire in the second round of cup play. He then lifted the Rhinos to a win in its quarterfinals match with his sudden death overtime game-winning goal in the

Much of the success the Clarkson hockey program has enjoyed since the early 1920s can be attributed to the numerous all-star goaltenders who patrolled the Golden Knights' crease over the years. One of the best that Clarkson fans have ever seen was Ed Macdonald. A 5-10, 165-pound native of Ottawa, Ontario, Macdonald anchored the Clarkson crease for head coach Bill Harrison's teams from 1955-58 and averaged 28 saves per game with a remarkable average of just 2.00 goals scored against him. Macdonald posted a 48-6 record and in the process was twice named an All-America (1957-58).

With Macdonald between the pipes, the Golden Knights enjoyed some of their most successful campaigns. As a sophomore in 1955-56, Macdonald helped Clarkson to its best season in the program's history as the Green and Gold skated to a perfect 23-0 record. The following two seasons he emerged as one of the best goaltenders in the nation, backstopping the Knights to their first two NCAA Tournament showings in 1957 and 1958 where they placed third both times.

In his first season with the Clarkson varsity, Macdonald played a key role in the undefeated 1955-56 campaign. Sharing time with veteran Don Cooper at the start of the season, Macdonald began to display his tremendous talents when he came off the bench in the third period to help Clarkson come from behind to defeat Boston College 7-6 in overtime at the Boston Tournament on December 30. Coach Harrison continued to alternate his two goaltenders for the next several weeks, during which time Clarkson maintained its unbeaten record, including shutout victories over Boston University and Dartmouth. Macdonald was then handed the assignment to start the last six games of the season, which was capped off by his 34-save effort in the season finale, a 7-4 victory over St. Lawrence at Clarkson Arena as the Knights finished with an unblemished

As a junior, Macdonald emerged as a team leader, serving in an assistant captain's role, and saw the bulk of the playing time in goal as the Knights posted a 19-3 overall record and made their first ever appearance in the 10-year history of the NCAAs to cap off the 1956-57 season. Macdonald's play took center stage in the national tournament, held at the Colorado Springs Broadmoor Ice Palace, as Clarkson finished third in the country. After losing to eventual champion Colorado College, 5-3, despite a 55-save performance by Macdonald, in the first round, the Knights came back to defeat Harvard 2-1 in the consolation game. Macdonald, who posted 44 stops against the Crimson, became the first Clarkson player named to an NCAA All-Tournament team in recognition of the 99 saves he made in the two games.

Macdonald was once again a main reason for the Knights' success the following year as he closed out his collegiate career by serving as captain on Clarkson's team, which posted a 17-3 overall record and made its second straight appearance in the NCAA Tournament. Macdonald turned back an average of 29 shots per game in 1957-58 and recorded shutouts over American International College (6-0) and Boston University (1-0). At the 1958 national championship tournament, played at the University of Minnesota's Williams Arena Rink in Minneapolis, Macdonald saved his best play when it mattered most to earn his second straight nod on the NCAA All-Tournament squad. After a tough 6-2 loss to eventual champion Denver in first round action, Clarkson was out shot by Harvard 39-18 in the consolation game, but Macdonald came up big with 38 saves to lead the Knights over the Cantabs 5-1 for their second consecutive third-place finish and the mythical Eastern crown in the national tourney.

Upon graduation in the spring of 1958 with a bachelor's degree in

One of only three former Clarkson Hockey players to have his retired sweater hanging in honorary display from the rafters at Cheel Arena, Colin Patterson was an all-star forward for the Golden Knights in the early 1980s who went on to a lengthy, productive career in the National Hockey League.

A three-year standout for Clarkson from 1980-83, the Rexdale, Ontario native ranks among the Green and Gold all-time leading scorers with an average of 1.55 points per game. Patterson amassed 64 goals and 91 assists through 100 games with the Knights. With the 6-2, 190-pound right wing/center playing a key role on the Knights' top lines, head coach Bill O'Flaherty's teams compiled a 71-26-6 record during Patterson's three seasons wearing the Clarkson sweater, and twice won the ECAC regular season title and competed in two NCAA Tournaments.

In his final season with the Knights, 1982-83, Patterson served as one of the few junior captains in Clarkson's history and gained ECAC All-Star and All-America recognition. He scored 20 or more goals and over 50 points in each of his three collegiate seasons and completed his Clarkson career by leading the Knights in scoring with his second straight 52-point campaign on 23 goals and 29 assists in 31 games.

After the completion of his junior campaign, Patterson signed a free-agent contract with the Calgary Flames on March 24, 1983 and began a highly successful nine-year career in the NHL that also included a two-year stretch with the Buffalo Sabres.

During the mid to late 1980s Calgary was an NHL super power. One of the most unheralded yet most valuable players from those teams was Patterson. He combined speed and anticipation to establish himself as one of the NHL's best defensive forwards. A tremendous fore checker who would sacrifice his body without thought, Patterson was a hard worker and dedicated athlete. He was also a character in the locker room, always cracking jokes to keep his team loose.

After a brief 13-game, minor-league stint with the Colorado Flames of the Central Hockey League, Patterson joined Calgary on a regular basis in 1983-84. After being recalled to the NHL Flames on October 23, 1983, he scored his first NHL goal three days later at St. Louis. In his first home game that season at Calgary's Saddledome, Patterson scored twice in a Flames win. In his first NHL season, he scored 13 goals and 27 points in 56 games. In seven seasons (1983-90) with the Flames, he tallied 188 points on 88 goals and 100 assists through 416 games and played in two Stanley Cup finals.

In Calgary's championship 1988-89 season, Patterson established a career-high 24 assists and totaled 38 points during the regular season and was a solid performer for the club in the postseason. In 22 playoff games he totaled 13 points and helped the Flames to the Stanley Cup championship when they defeated Montreal 4-2 in the best-of-seven-game series. Patterson capped off that sensational season by being named a finalist for the Frank Selke Trophy as the NHL's best-defensive forward.

The Flames dealt Patterson, who suffered a knee injury in 1989, to Buffalo where he finished out his career by playing the next two seasons from 1991-93. Patterson left the NHL with career totals of 96 goals, 109 assists and 205 points in 504 regular season games. In 85 playoff contests, he had 29 points and one championship ring.

At the urging of O'Flaherty and former Clarkson assistant coach Terry Meagher, who supported his decision to leave the University after his junior season, Patterson returned to Potsdam for three

KWASI POKU

2005 INDUCTEE

The arrival of Kwasi Poku on the Clarkson College campus back in 1965 marked the beginning of a high-scoring era for the Golden Knights' soccer program. A native of Kumasi, Ghana West Africa, the 5-9, 135-pound forward brought a much-needed scoring punch to the Clarkson offense and provided plenty of spectacular moments on the Snell Field pitch.

Started as a varsity program in 1953, the Golden Knights' soccer team, under inaugural Clarkson Athletic Hall of Fame inductee Jack Hantz, began to emerge as one of New York State's more successful small college teams in the mid-1960s with Poku leading the way. During the fall seasons from 1965 through 1968, Clarkson compiled a 24-19-2 overall record and scored an average of 3.31 goals per game as Poku headlined the offense.

He made an impact right away in his freshman year by scoring eight goals as the Knights set a new school mark for wins with seven against four losses. Poku was Clarkson's top scorer in 1966 with seven goals and three assists as the Green and Gold posted a 6-4-1 mark.

As a junior he spearheaded the most potent scoring attack in Clarkson's 15-year history with 14 goals and five assists. Poku opened the 1967 campaign with four goals in the Knights' 9-3 romp over LeMoyne.

In 1968, serving as team captain, Poku led first-year head coach Paul Rose's squad to a 7-4-1 record. He scored three goals in Clarkson's first win of the year, a 7-1 rout of LeMoyne, and completed his senior season with 24 points, including a team-high nine goals.

Also a standout in the classroom, the chemical engineering major was named to the Dean's List every semester and was tapped into Phalanx in his junior year. Poku graduated as the Knights' all-time leading scorer and still ranks among the top five scorers at the University with 92 career points on 38 goals and 16 assists through 45 games.

Poku was named a first-team Independent College Athletic Conference (ICAC) All-Star three times along with earning All-NYS honors once and became Clarkson's first soccer All-America when he earned the prestigious honor in his senior campaign.

JACK PORTER

In the mid-1950s, Clarkson established itself among the elite teams in the nation with its championship-caliber squads. One of the key components of the Golden Knights' success during that era was the play of Jack Porter. Ranking among the Green and Gold's all-time leading scorers by averaging close to two points a game, the 5-10, 180-pound, Sudbury, Ontario native provided Golden Knights' fans with plenty of excitement at Clarkson Arena.

Porter, who scored 149 points on 63 goals and 86 assists through 82 games from 1952-56, teamed up with classmates Tom Meeker and Ellard Gutzman to make up an exciting, high-scoring line for head coach Bill Harrison's teams. With Porter centering the talented trio and powering the Knights' potent offense, Clarkson compiled a 57-21-3 record during his standout collegiate career. In his junior and senior campaigns, the Knights won an amazing 41 of 45 games, capped off by the perfect season of 1955-56.

Porter displayed his considerable talents and hard-working style early in his collegiate career. Playing in 14 games as a freshman in 1951-52, Porter chipped in seven goals and 14 assists and continually improved throughout the season. Porter hit his stride the following year when he led the Green and Gold with 33 points on a team-high 18 goals and 15 assists.

He opened his junior campaign with a hat trick in the Knights' 10-5 win over Michigan State and continued to produce all season long, finishing as Clarkson's second leading scorer with 52 points on 21 goals and 32 assists through 21 games in 1954-55. Under the guidance of Harrison, and the steady play of Porter, Clarkson posted a phenomenal undefeated record in 1955-56 and were crowned Tri-State League Champs. Prior to the start of that season, Harrison remarked, "Jack is one of the best center ice men I have had at Clarkson. His tireless work on the ice, offensive playmaking and steady defensive brilliance, will be one of our ace cards in this tough season coming up." "Blackjack" and his teammates certainly lived up to their lofty expectations that winter.

Regarded by many as one of the best seasons ever recorded by a collegiate hockey team, Clarkson skated to a 23-0-0 mark in Porter's senior campaign.

Porter notched 45 points on 16 goals and 29 assists that winter and was named a second-team Tri-State League All-Star. Porter played a key role in what Harrison termed the Knights' biggest victory of the season, a 7-6 come-from-behind overtime win over Boston College on December 30. Trailing 4-1 midway through the second period, Clarkson rallied back to tie the score 6-6 with Porter's unassisted goal with less than four minutes to play in regulation. Porter then fed Eddie Rowe (Clarkson HOF '92) for the game-winning goal at 5:12 of the extra session as the Knights came away with the victory over the Eagles at the Boston Tournament.

In the season's final game on March 6, Porter made no doubt that the Knights would go undefeated. "Jack Porter was all over the ice, scoring, setting up plays, back checking, and along with Meeker and Gutzman, held control throughout," said Harrison in a post-game interview. He tallied a hat trick and added two assists as the Knights skated by North Country rival St. Lawrence 7-4 in Potsdam to complete the season with an unblemished record.

The 1955-56 squad was the first Clarkson team to be invited to the NCAA Championships. The Knights, however, refused to go. Clarkson had eight seniors, including Porter, who were four-year varsity players and under NCAA rules were ineligible. The team

A two-sport standout for Clarkson College in the early 1940s, Henry "Hank" Przybylowski starred in the backfield for the Golden Knights' football team in the fall and was impressive at the plate and in the outfield for the Tech baseball team in the spring.

After an outstanding rookie campaign in 1940 on Clarkson's undefeated and untied "Frosh" football team, Przybylowski played a large role in Tech's most successful seasons in years during the fall of 1941. Mainstays of the team were the sophomore and seniors. In the backfield, the Irvington, NJ native made a solid contribution in his first varsity campaign with his running and pass catching as the Knights posted a 5-1-1 record to end up near the top of the small college elevens.

Clarkson, guided by head coach Pete Dwyer (HOF '95), posted overwhelming victories over Ithaca (20-0), City College (20-0) of New York, Cortland (23-0), Hartwick (13-0) and St. Lawrence (26-0). The Techers lone loss was to national powerhouse Syracuse University at Archibold Stadium.

As a junior in 1942, Przybylowski was a bright spot in Clarkson's rebuilding season. The elusive back starred in the Green and Gold's first win of the year, a 28-0 victory over a team from Watertown. Przybylowski brought the crowd to its feet at Snell Field in the first quarter with a 43-year return of a punt to open the scoring. He also took care of the final two scores with a 12-yard end run and then a touchdown pass. Przybylowski's passing performance played a key role in the Knights' second win of the year, a 14-12 triumph over the visiting Brooklyn College gridgers.

athletics, wiping out the 1943 senior season for Przybylowski and his teammates.

Przybylowski was equally impressive for head coach Hank Hodge's (HOF '92) baseball team. In 1942, during his first year of varsity competition on the diamond, he continued to shine for Clarkson athletics as the leading hitter on the baseball team with a .366 average.

In the spring of 1943, wartime difficulties doomed college baseball so, in lieu of college competition, town teams and amateur clubs were scheduled for Sunday games at Snell Field. Przybylowski was once again a leading hitter as the Techers combined for a .292 batting average en route to an 8-1 record.

A well-rounded student on the Clarkson campus, the mechanical engineering major, was a member of Phalanx, served as president of Clarkson's Varsity "C" Club, was Senior Class President and was the student representative on Clarkson's Athletic Board of Control.

Przybylowski's son, Henry Jr. '65, followed in his father's footsteps and played baseball at Clarkson under legendary coaches Hodge and Jack Phillips (HOF '92).
